

VINYAN STUDIO • MIND & CALM SERIES

SLEEP & INSOMNIA

Bonus Pack

Checklists · Cards · Planners · Cheat Sheets

How to Use This Bonus Pack

This pack collects quick-reference tools that pair with the Sleep & Insomnia Reset Guide and Workbook — checklists, cards, and planners built to actually use, not just read once.

Print what's useful, keep a photo of the emergency cards on your phone, and revisit this pack whenever you need a fast reminder rather than the full guide.

Bonus 1: Printable Nightly Wind-Down Checklist

A full-page version of the routine from Chapter 10 — check off each step as you go.

Lights dimmed 30-45 minutes before bed	■
Phone/screens away or on night mode	■
Notepad by the bed for any racing thoughts	■
One calming activity done (reading, stretching, shower)	■
Room temperature comfortable and cool	■
One round of 4-7-8 breathing completed	■
Tomorrow's top priority written down	■
Worry window completed earlier in the evening	■
Bedroom free of clutter and bright light	■
Consistent bedtime, same as most nights	■

Bonus 2: "Can't Sleep" Emergency Card

A single-glance card for the moments you're wide awake and frustrated. Keep a photo of this on your phone.

1. Don't check the clock.
2. Remind yourself: this is uncomfortable, not dangerous, and it will pass.
3. Extended-exhale breathing — out longer than in, five rounds.
4. If 20 minutes pass, get up, dim light, calm activity, return when sleepy.
5. Jot any racing thought down for tomorrow's worry window — don't solve it now.

Why Each Step Works

- Not checking the clock removes a major source of added pressure.
- Naming the discomfort as temporary counters the catastrophizing that often escalates at night.
- The extended exhale directly signals your nervous system toward calm.
- Getting up after 20 minutes prevents the bed from becoming associated with frustration.

Bonus 3: Sleep Environment Checklist

A printable version of the environment audit — pin this near your bed as an ongoing reminder.

Dark enough (blackout curtains or eye mask)	■
Cool (60-67°F / 15-19°C)	■
Comfortable bedding and pillows	■
Noise controlled or masked	■
Bed reserved mainly for sleep	■
Screens out of arm's reach	■
Clock not visible from bed	■

Bonus 4: Sleep Affirmation Cards

Cut or reference individually — read one slowly during your wind-down routine.

My body knows how to sleep. I don't need to force it.	This is uncomfortable, not dangerous. It will pass.
One shorter night doesn't ruin tomorrow.	I release what I cannot control about tonight.
Rest is happening even in the quiet moments before sleep.	I don't need every night to be perfect.
My mind is allowed to be quiet right now.	Tomorrow's worries can wait for tomorrow's worry window.

Bonus 5: 30-Day Sleep Reset Challenge

Each day pairs one small sleep-supportive action with space to note how it went.

Day	Action	How it went
1	Set a consistent wake time and stick to it
2	Get 10 minutes of morning light exposure
3	Move your last caffeine to before noon
4	Build your wind-down routine from the Workbook
5	Dim household lights an hour before bed
6	Keep screens out of the bedroom tonight
7	Try 4-7-8 breathing before sleep
8	Do a body scan meditation before bed
9	Complete your evening worry window
10	Avoid checking the clock if you wake at night
11	Try progressive muscle relaxation before sleep
12	Keep your room a few degrees cooler tonight
13	Skip the afternoon nap today
14	Finish your last meal at least 2-3 hours before bed
15	Write in your pre-sleep brain dump
16	Practice paradoxical intention if you're anxious about sleeping
17	Avoid alcohol this evening and notice any difference
18	Get outside for a walk earlier today
19	Try the extended-exhale technique before bed
20	Complete your Sleep Environment Checklist
21	Read a physical book instead of scrolling before bed
22	Notice one cognitive distortion about sleep today
23	Use the notepad technique if thoughts arise at night

24	Keep today's wake time consistent even after a rough night
25	Try humming or a few minutes of gentle stretching before bed
26	Reflect: what's one pattern you've noticed?
27	Plan tomorrow's priorities tonight instead of at 2am
28	Revisit your Sleep Toolkit from the Workbook
29	Give yourself credit for one thing you did well this month
30	Reflect: what's different after 30 days?

Bonus 6: White Noise & Soundscape Guide

A quick reference for choosing sound to support sleep, based on Chapter 14 of the Guide.

Sound Type	Best For
White noise	Masking sudden, variable noises (traffic, neighbors)
Brown/pink noise	A deeper, softer tone some people find more soothing than white noise
Rain or nature sounds	A calming, non-mechanical option for wind-down
Fan or air purifier	Dual-purpose — cooling the room while masking noise
Silence + earplugs	Best for light sleepers in unpredictable noise environments

Choosing What Works for You

- Test one option for at least 3-4 nights before switching — first-night novelty can skew your impression.
- Keep volume low and steady rather than loud.
- A consistent nightly soundscape can itself become part of your wind-down cue.

Bonus 7: Middle-of-the-Night Waking Card

For when you wake partway through the night and can't easily fall back asleep.

1. Keep the room dark — avoid turning on bright lights or checking your phone.
2. Don't check the time.
3. Use extended-exhale breathing, lying still.
4. If a thought is racing, jot it on your bedside notepad and set it aside.
5. If 20 minutes pass with no sleep, get up briefly in dim light, then return when sleepy.

Bonus 8: Travel Sleep Kit Checklist

Pack or plan for these before a trip, based on Chapter 37 of the Guide.

Eye mask	■
Earplugs or noise-cancelling headphones	■
A travel pillow or familiar pillowcase	■
Your wind-down routine adapted for a hotel room	■
A plan for morning light exposure at your destination	■
A consistent bedtime relative to your new timezone, not your home one	■

Bonus 9: Sleep Cognitive Distortions Quick List

Distortion	Quick Test
Catastrophizing	Am I assuming tomorrow is ruined by tonight?
All-or-nothing	Am I calling this a 'terrible night' after one brief waking?
Fortune telling	Am I certain I won't fall back asleep?
Should statement	Am I holding a rigid rule about when I 'should' be asleep?

Distortion	Quick Test
Catastrophizing	Am I assuming tomorrow is ruined by tonight?
All-or-nothing	Am I calling this a 'terrible night' after one brief waking?
Fortune telling	Am I certain I won't fall back asleep?
Should statement	Am I holding a rigid rule about when I 'should' be asleep?

Bonus: Sleep Breathing Techniques at a Glance

Technique	Pattern	Best For
4-7-8 Breathing	4 in – 7 hold – 8 out	Falling asleep, winding down
Extended Exhale	In for 4 – out for 6-8	Middle-of-the-night waking
Box Breathing	4-4-4-4	General calm before your routine begins

Bonus: Sleep & Mood Check-In Card

A quick daily check, useful alongside your Workbook tracker.

Today's Date
Hours Slept
Mood on Waking (1-10)
Energy Level (1-10)
One Word for Today

Bonus 10: Weekly Sleep Review Cheat Sheet

Habit	Followed This Week?	Helped?
Wind-down routine followed most nights	■	■
Consistent wake time, including weekends	■	■
Caffeine cutoff respected	■	■
Worry window used	■	■
Sleep environment checked	■	■
Emergency card used if needed	■	■

Bonus 11: Evening Snack Guide

General ideas for a light evening snack if you're genuinely hungry close to bedtime, based on Chapter 16 of the Guide — going to bed very hungry can disrupt sleep as much as a heavy meal.

- A small portion of whole-grain crackers with a little cheese or nut butter.
- A small bowl of yogurt.
- A piece of fruit, like a banana.
- A small handful of nuts.
- Herbal tea without caffeine, such as chamomile.

Keep portions small and avoid heavy, spicy, or very rich foods close to bedtime.

Bonus 12: Nap Planning Guide

Nap Length	Effect
10-20 minutes	A quick refresh with minimal grogginess afterward
30-60 minutes	Can cause grogginess on waking; may reduce nighttime sleep pressure
90 minutes	A full sleep cycle; less grogginess but a bigger time commitment
After 3pm	More likely to interfere with nighttime sleep onset

If sleep anxiety is a current struggle, minimizing naps altogether for a few weeks can help build stronger nighttime sleep pressure while you reset your pattern.

Bonus 13: Screen-Free Wind-Down Activity Cards

Ideas for the last 30-45 minutes before bed, in place of scrolling.

Read a physical book or magazine	Light stretching or gentle yoga
Journaling or a brain dump	Listening to a calm podcast or audiobook (audio only, screen off)
A warm shower or bath	Simple coloring or drawing
Folding laundry or light tidying	Reviewing your gratitude or sleep wins log

Bonus 14: Bedroom Declutter Checklist

Surfaces clear of work materials	■
Laundry put away, not piled visibly	■
Nightstand holds only sleep-related items	■
Excess electronics removed or unplugged	■
Blackout curtains or blinds in good working order	■
Clutter that creates visual 'noise' minimized	■

Bonus 15: Partner & Bed-Sharing Communication Scripts

Raising a Sleep Need

"I've been having a harder time sleeping lately — would you be open to trying [earplugs/separate blankets/a earlier lights-out] together?"

Addressing Snoring or Movement

"I love sharing a bed with you, and I think we could both sleep better with [specific solution] — want to try it?"

Different Schedules

"Our schedules don't quite line up right now — could we figure out a wind-down routine that works for both of us, even if bedtimes differ?"

Bonus 16: More Sleep Affirmation Cards

I've fallen asleep before, and I'll fall asleep again.	My worth isn't measured by how well I slept last night.
I am safe, even in the quiet and the dark.	This wave of wakefulness will pass, like every one before it.
I trust my body to do what it already knows how to do.	Rest counts too, even without full sleep.

Bonus 17: Shift Work Quick Reference

- Use blackout curtains and an eye mask to simulate night during daytime sleep.
- Keep a consistent sleep schedule relative to your shift, even on days off if possible.
- Use bright light strategically during your 'wake' period, even if it's nighttime by the clock.
- Limit caffeine in the second half of your shift.
- Consider ear plugs or white noise to manage daytime household sounds.

Bonus 18: Monthly Sleep Habit Tracker

A simple grid to mark off your core habits across a full month at a glance.

Habit	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	12	13	14	15
Wind-down routine
Consistent wake time
Caffeine cutoff
Screens out of bedroom

Continue on a second copy of this page for days 16-31, or track digitally in your Notion Tracker.

Thank You

This Bonus Pack is designed to be used alongside the Sleep & Insomnia Reset Guide and Workbook. Keep it handy, revisit it often, and adapt anything here to fit what actually works for your body and your nights.

— Vinyan Studio